California Subject Matter Projects (CSMP) Legislative Report on Efforts to Address Learning Loss Due to the COVID-19 Pandemic

On June 29, 2020, the postsecondary education trailer bill (SB 116) directed the University of California to prepare a report that compiled three years of information regarding the work of the California Subject Matter Project's (CSMP) to address learning loss due to the COVID-19 pandemic. The following report is forwarded in compliance with this requirement – contained in Section 99200(b) of the Education Code, which directs the University as follows:

On or before January 1, 2024, providing a report on addressing learning loss in the mathematics, science, writing, and reading and literature projects specified in Section 99201 to the Governor and to appropriate policy and fiscal committees of the Legislature. The report shall include, but need not be limited to, all of the following information, compiled for a three-year period:

(A) The number, and level of experience, of participants in the mathematics, science, writing, and reading and literature projects that are specifically focused on addressing learning loss in mathematics, science, and English, language arts due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

(B) The total amount of funds expended, on an annual basis that are specifically focused on addressing learning loss in mathematics, science, and English, language arts due to the COVID-19 pandemic, for the mathematics, science, writing, and reading and literature projects.

(C) An explanation of the type of professional development activities offered pursuant to the mathematics, science, writing, and reading and literature projects to address learning loss in mathematics, science, and English, language arts due to the COVID-19 pandemic, including the extent to which teachers were provided professional development focused on delivering career-oriented, integrated academic and technical content.

(D) A list of the name and location of each school affiliated with the mathematics, science, writing, and reading and literature projects that are specifically focused on addressing learning loss in mathematics, science, and English, language arts due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

(Amended by Stats. 2020, Ch. 25, Sec. 16. (SB 116) Effective June 29, 2020.)

This document is the annual report responding to this legislative request.

Background

Established through state statute in 1988, the CSMP, administered by the University of California, is dedicated to improving student learning and literacy through educator professional learning and instructional resource development. Its nine disciplinary networks—in the arts, global education, history-social science, mathematics, reading and literature, physical education and health, science, world languages and writing—serve, on average, 25,000–30,000 educators from more than 1,200 schools and districts each year. Regional CSMP project sites, located at universities across California, bring together university faculty and experienced K-12 teachers to design and co-lead professional learning programs and develop instructional resources.

The California Budget Act of 2020 appropriated $6.0 million to the University of California payable from the Federal Trust Fund to support the mitigation of learning loss in mathematics, science, and English and language arts through existing California Subject Matter Projects resulting from the impact of COVID- related school closures and disruptions to learning experienced by students and families across the state.

As the state administrator for the federal Elementary and Secondary School Emergency Relief Act (ESSER) funds, the California Department of Education (CDE) required an interagency contract with the University of California to transfer spending authority for these funds. Although these funds were appropriated by the Legislature in July 2020 with a two-year period in which to spend them, a contract with the University of California was not executed until late March 2021, leaving a little more than a single year in which CSMP Projects could spend the funds. Despite this delay, more than 7,800 K-12 educators from 1,692 schools and 526 school districts and county offices of education participated in 263 CSMP-designed professional learning programs that were made possible with this funding provided at a critically important time. These professional learning services are described in more depth in this report.

How Elementary and Secondary School Emergency Relief (ESSER) Funds Were Used by CSMP to Support Schools, Teachers, and Students

Reducing financial barriers to support educators. CSMP’s current/traditional business model, based upon its annual state and federal allocation of funding, demands that program leaders secure additional funds to support total program costs—such as individual registration fees, contracts with schools or districts, or external grants. This model—charging for participation—necessarily creates a financial barrier for some teachers who cannot secure district or school support which can prevent or reduce their attendance at CSMP programs. ESSER funding enabled the CSMP to reduce or, in some cases, eliminate our program fees altogether, which greatly reduced financial barriers to participation.

Addressing the social and emotional needs of teachers and students. In our professional learning and instructional resource development, CSMP leaders emphasized the importance of attending to children’s academic and social-emotional learning (SEL) needs across all subject areas. These needs have been particularly acute for those students from our most challenged communities—those which experienced a disproportionate number of COVID-related human and economic losses. Many CSMP programs supported by ESSER funds embedded SEL supports for teachers, e.g., listening sessions, coaching, and collaborative planning, and offered teachers strategies to engage students in learning and to attend to their social and emotional development.

A few examples:

- The California World Language Project’s 2021 Leadership Institute focused on developing teacher capacity to provide culturally responsive and social emotional well-being.
- The California Writing Project held workshops and book groups to share strategies to use writing as a tool to support social-emotional learning and trauma-informed teaching during the 2021–22 school year.
- The California Global Education Project offered workshops designed to improve educators’ support for LGBTQ+ students.
- The California Arts Project hosted “Thriving through the Arts” to support educator and student well-being and social and emotional capacity. Each session of this online series featured a panel of therapists (art, drama, expressive arts, and dance movement) and was moderated by a board-certified registered art therapist.
- The California History-Social Science Project developed multiple programs that encouraged students to learn about (and appreciate) their local communities and history. In one lesson shared with teachers in the Los Angeles area, for example, students were given the opportunity to explore their own family’s histories. They also learned about the Latinx community in Los Angeles, and, in particular, Latinx chefs, food industry workers, and others who serve in the community (i.e. “essential workers”).

Attending to “Learning Loss” in mathematics, science, English/Language Arts, and other critical content areas. Given the inequitable impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, CSMP deployed its nine-project network to develop and share lessons and strategies for teachers to use to engage and support their most vulnerable students. To support learning recovery across the disciplines and to substantively respond to related issues of inequity – CSMP marshaled the collective disciplinary and pedagogical expertise of our entire network.

CSMP offered an interdisciplinary and integrated approach to learning that develops the critical thinking, communication, literacy, and disciplinary skills outlined in California’s Common Core State Standards, Next Generation Science Standards (NGSS), and English Language Development Standards. Some examples of these discipline-specific and interdisciplinary work include:

- Action Research to Address Pandemic Learning Loss. The California Reading and Literature Project launched a three-part online series focused on the science of reading, including Addressing Unfinished Learning, Interpreting Diagnostic Assessments, Grouping Students for Foundational Skills Instruction, Lesson Planning with Decodable Readers, Polysyllabic Decoding and Morphological Awareness, and the Plan-Do-Study-Act Cycle.
- Super Science Saturdays. In partnership with local county offices of education, the California Science Project hosted Saturday workshops for teachers designed to further support the implementation of NGSS in classrooms across the Central Valley.
- Social Transformation, Writing Instruction, and Joy in Our Classrooms. The California Writing Project hosted this three-part virtual workshop series for teachers of grades one through five, focused on teaching narrative, argumentative, and multimodal writing.
- Math Teachers’ Circle MathFest. The California Mathematics Project developed a hybrid series for educators in the Santa Cruz area, designed to foster a community of practice for math teachers, math enthusiasts, and professional mathematicians.
- Sustainable Schoolyards. The California Global Education Project hosted online workshops for teams of educators working collaboratively to develop and maintain sustainable outdoor learning environments.
- Grade Groups. The California History-Social Science Project hosted ten separate grade-level-specific multi-session online workshop series (TK–3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12-Government, and TK–12 ethnic studies) for elementary and secondary history-social science teachers.
- Summer Studio: Artists as Creative Investigators. The California Arts Project’s Summer Studio program leveraged interest in the new Arts Education Framework to engage teachers in discussions about inquiry, the use of technology, and students’ social-emotional needs related to school reopening.

Developing teacher leaders. Through summer institutes, online workshop series, school year communities of practice, and the strategic placement of teacher leaders as coaches, presenters, and facilitators in local schools, the CSMP network continued its long-term efforts to develop and sustain local discipline-specific cadres of teacher leaders, supported by ESSER funding:

- Participants at the California Writing Project's (CWP) Advanced Leadership Institute collaboratively designed curriculum units for students in CWP's young writers' program; the units will also be showcased in future workshops for teachers.
- Teacher Leaders from the California World Languages Project created an entirely new program to meet the needs of Heritage teachers and students, which now serves as a pilot program to inform the development of future Heritage-focused professional learning programs.
- The California Mathematics Project launched an eight-month-long leadership development program for mathematics teachers in the Santa Barbara area. This series, which concluded in early 2023, encouraged participants to engage in rigorous mathematical sense-making activities, to design lessons using the Universal Design for Learning framework, to practice routines and skills for engaging students in mathematical problem-solving experiences, and to visit classrooms to observe routines and problem-solving activities in practice with students.

How Educators Were Recruited

Each of the nine disciplinary projects that make up the California Subject Matter Projects have developed and maintained their own discipline-specific network of thousands of classroom teachers across the state. These networks formed the basis of our recruitment pool for our ESSER-funded programs. Given our long-term commitment to serving the schools and communities in greatest need, we worked hard to extend multiple invitations to educators in these partner schools and districts.

Using our existing social media and email marketing systems and our cadres of teacher leaders, as well as word of mouth and collaborative partnerships with schools, districts, and county offices of education, we shared information about the various professional learning programs and resources, targeting some by grade level, others by geography, and still others from their previous attendance records. We offered programs for free or at a very reduced cost and offered them through a variety of formats, including online, in-person, and, in some cases, through a hybrid approach.

How Educators Responded

California educators responded positively to the ESSER-funded programs hosted by the CSMP, and many said that these professional learning programs inspired them and even rekindled their commitment to their profession.

For example, one second-grade teacher who attended a literacy and physical education program hosted by the California Physical Education and Health Project told project leaders that she “... came away with great ideas and a refreshing new view of Physical Education instruction in my classroom. Like it was mentioned at the end of today, ‘Every student deserves quality Physical Education instruction!’”

Another participant, who attended a Transforming Literacy program hosted by the California Reading and Literature Project, asked for, “... more of things just like this! It has been years since I have attended meaningful, inspirational Professional Development that reminded me how much I enjoy continued learning and growth!”

Another theme that emerged in participant feedback was increased content knowledge and disciplinary understanding. As one participant in an (8th) Grade Groups series hosted by the California History-Social Science Project shared, “[T]he most successful experience for me was the ability to listen to the group members. I recently transferred from 6th grade history to 8th grade history. The curriculum is completely different, and I appreciated the depth in which the topics were covered. I now have a deeper understanding of standards to build meaningful lessons for students using the resources presented throughout the year. Thank you! It was refreshing to attend such well organized and purposeful training.”

Yet another response we heard from educators was that the ESSER-funded programs hosted by the CSMP successfully targeted the needs of teachers and students in the midst of a pandemic. “This series was so timely for me, as I was looking for a positive community to begin my growth out of the trauma that was COVID teaching and learning ... you all have given me such a lift in spirit and reminder of why I do what I do,” shared one teacher who attended the California Reading and Literature Project’s Community of Practice series.

And finally, a number of educators shared stories about how CSMP programs sponsored by ESSER funds supported initiatives and programs within their own schools and districts. “The materials and advice about planning, infrastructure, and the best ways to get the State Seal of Civic Engagement created and supported in our district,” shared one participant in the California History-Social Science Project’s Civic Engagement and Taking Action on the State Seal program. “Also,” the teacher continued, “a lot of the activities you had us do were really helpful tools and helped to generate productive conversations among us.”

ESSER Funds Expended by Project

As mentioned in the introduction to this report, funding to support his work was approved by the California State Legislature in July 2020, to be spent over a two-year period. However, the necessity of executing a contract between the California Department of Education and the University of California Office of the President caused significant delays in being able to distribute funding to the CSMP statewide offices and project sites. This process took most of Year 1 of a two-year period to spend the funds. Despite the initial delays, once funding became available, all CSMP Statewide Offices and regional sites were able to mobilize quickly and put them to use in support of teacher professional learning and instructional resource development.

¹ The total number of educators in this first column are not distinct, but instead represent the total number of participants for each program combined. Individual educators who attended more than one ESSER-funded program are counted as separate participants each time they attended a program.

² The total numbers of schools and districts listed in the bottom row of this table are unduplicated, while individual project numbers may include duplicates, as teachers from a given school or district may attend programming from more than one disciplinary project. As a result, adding the numbers in the schools and then district columns will result in different numbers than those listed in the bottom row of this table.
